

Giselle Sebag, MPH, LEED AP, Fitwel Ambassador

Director of Programs at the Center for Active Design

Giselle Sebag, MPH, LEED AP, Fitwel Ambassador, is Director of Programs at the Center for Active Design. She is an impact-driven healthy places development specialist who has been working to promote healthy, resilient and inclusive homes, workplaces, communities and cities for more than a decade. Previously, she was head of Built Environment at the Clinton Global Initiative (CGI). Other past experiences include institutions such as: the Brookings Institution, Southface, the Center for Research in Environmental Epidemiology (CREAL), the Institute for Transportation and Development Policy (ITDP), MASS Design Group, Doctors Without Borders (MSF) and the Project for Public Spaces (PPS). Her areas of expertise include sustainable architecture, urban planning and global public health. Ms. Sebag earned her B.S. from UT-SOA, M.Sc. from TU Darmstadt and her M.P.H. at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health.