Sundowner at Punchbowl Social Stapleton
NEWH Top ID 2018
Industry News
What every Designer and Architect loves, and the new Punchbowl Social in Stapleton has all the details you need to blow your socks off! NEWH and the Design team from Punchbowl Social hosted our first Sundowner event on March 15th with an in depth tour of the new location. Megan Freckleton, Kelly Gavlick, and Frank graciously lead a group of 30+ eager members of the design community through the whimsical minds and space of these leading designers who have clearly honed their craft with the details in the design.

The process of designing with the original Air Traffic Control Tower of the former Stapleton Airport was no easy task, the intent was to preserve an important piece of Colorado History while marrying it with all the fantastic goods Punchbowl has been known to tender, and boy, did they ever! There is no lack of attention in the design team's ability to make this happen, the original walls of the tower were carefully removed (with fingers crossed and sleepless nights) as well some kept in place and incorporated into new spaces. No easy achievement on any project!

All the fine specifics are so apparent throughout the tour, down to the incredible wallpaper, gorgeous light fixtures, and drop-dead tile throughout the space, the feeling is fluid and engaging… to any demographic. Whether you are bowling, enjoying the vintage arcade, singing karaoke, getting your butt kicked in a game of Foosball or Ping-Pong, or simply enjoying a craft cocktail or fine cuisine….the flux of this new location is simply unparalleled. Get yourself over there and enjoy!
