POSH Textiles is the American division of an Indian family of mill owners, in business for over 60 years. During this period, our manufacturing evolved from hand-woven silks to durable constructions produced in a modern, ISO 14001 certified factory in Bangalore with vast design capabilities. Owning manufacturing facilities allows us to execute our design vision – and yours, whether through customization of standards or full custom development. Our products are made in India, but we have been established in the United States for two generations. We hold stock locally, in our own warehouse, with samples and yardage on hand for your project needs. Fast turnaround is fundamental to our excellent and attentive customer service.

Sustainability Statement:

The POSH Textiles Collection was developed using post-consumer recycled polyester in combination with cotton, rayon and nylon. Posh Textiles and its sister mill are committed to operating as a sustainable company. There are many kinds of wastes that are generated from our manufacturing and marketing processes. It is our goal to for zero emissions by either reducing the amount of emissions, reducing the use of virgin materials or purchasing carbon credit to ensure sustainability for our planet. It is our responsibility to ensure our planet is available to the current generation and future generations.
